

Angelo Costanzo

Angelo Francesco Antonio Costanzo was born 9 May 1976 in Adelaide South Australia.

In 1994 at 18 years of age he won the SA player of the year award at Salisbury United, and was invited to join Adelaide City on an off-season tour of Vietnam.

In 1995/96, his first season in the national league, he played alongside two of Australia's most credentialed defenders in Alex Tobin and Milan Ivanovic, and established a regular starting position as Adelaide City reached the preliminary final. He went on to play with Adelaide United in the 2005-2006 A-League Premiership game.

Angelo was part of the OFC Nations Cup Runners-up Australian 2002 squad and the 2008 FIFA World Cup campaign in Japan. He went on to play for Newcastle Jets FC in 2009 before being voted into the Adelaide United Team of the Decade.

He is married to wife Helen and is the father of two children; Domenic and Liliana.
